Lee's parents and my parents were good friends. I remember them playing cards together and my dad would go hunting with Lee's dad nearly every year. Dad always called him "Jim". I was shocked to see what his name was, but I shouldn't have been. In those days, people called each other what ever they wanted. I remember my brother and I being taken in by Lee's family for several days while my parents were out of town in a hospital in Virginia in early 1963. I'll always have fond memories of Lee's family. ----Milton Whitesell

Lee and I grew up across from each other on Nashua Road. We could always count on him to find some humor in just about everything. We hadn't seen each other in decades, but I'd kept up with him through friends at SW Bell. I was so glad I got to see and talk with him in August during the reunion. I heard that laugh from another room and knew it could only be Lee. All losses are difficult, but the time of year makes it even more difficult. My thoughts are with Lee and his family as you make this journey. David Stockwell
