“ Pat seemed at peace during my visit in his kitchen just before Memorial Day. He knew the cancer was a threat, but he looked great. He spoke with such pride of his children and grandchildren, and he seemed genuinely happy. It wasn't the first time in recent years that he expressed his gratitude about getting a second chance to appreciate all that he had.

Pat was a godsend to our aunt Mary K, looking after her house when she made the unplanned move to assisted living in Oklahoma. And he made my mother so happy with a surprise visit after she broke her hip. It surprised Pat that my mom recognized him, but she did. "You're my sister's son!" she said as she got a big hug from him. Last September, he met two of my friends and me at Chicken Annie's as we made a cross-country drive. As we sampled the menu, he gave us the history and lots of other stories. We didn't have a to-the-minute schedule, and I fear he might have waited at the restaurant a while for us, but he lingered long with us.

I loved him, and will miss him, and I am so thankful for the heart-to-heart talks he and I shared in the last 3 or so years.

Eternal peace, Cousin!

“ I was very close to your father and loved him very much. He called me they day he was diagnosed with lung cancer. He loved each of you and the grandkids so much. He was very proud of each of you. We had been very close since the mid-eighties. I always prayed for Pat. Life is not going to be the same without my dear friend. Sympathy to you all. From Cathy Bell Ramona OK

“ Pat was a few years older than me and when my dad would stop by to visit his dad I would want to tag along with Pat and goof around on their farm. I would ride my bike one mile over to play with him when I was a pre-teen. We went to different schools so I didn't get to know him at school but I always considered him a farm friend. I was so sorry to hear about his long battle with cancer and how he kept that to just his family. I wish I would have known as I would have been praying for him. Prayers to your family at this time of your loss.
